The "Junior" Story

(By request, this statement which appeared in many "Junior" programs is repeated.)

It all started right after the ending of World War II when a group of boys, not yet 12 years old, loudly protested about not being able to play the same as their older friends in the Edgehill Gymnasium. So, it was given a skeptical try, and to the surprise of all, the "Junior" program became the most colorful and the most enthusiastic. At first, the boys dyed their own undershirts and had their mothers sew on numbers, but today they are decked out in eye-catching starred uniforms of which they are very proud. They also boast an impressive coaching and managerial staff.

The purposes of the program include the teaching of some of the basic fundamentals of basketball, to start teaching a "team" concept rather than the "individual" one, to plant the seeds of sportsmanship behavior, to teach team discipline, and, of course, just to have lots of fun! Please notice that competition is not listed above although the boys are occasionally allowed a real game with a visiting group. And, by the way, they always compete quite impressively. The program is Church sponsored, and it is believed that the above objectives are very consistent with what we would all wish our young men to become.

Everyone loves the famous Edgehill "Juniors"! They represent an envious model seldom matched in later years. And it all would not be possible without the sustained assistance from the leaders of the Edgehill First and Second Wards, the support from a marvelous group of interested parents, the ever-enduring patience of the team manager and coach, the admiration of the many graduated "Juniors," the encouragement of friends, and finally, those loveable "Juniors" themselves.
