

MY EXPERIENCE WITH JUNIORS

Juniors is a program that teaches 9 year old boys how to play the game of basketball. When I was in Juniors my coach was my Uncle Blaine so he would use my cousin and me as examples to the rest of the team.

At first I was just a ball boy. The responsibilities of a ballboy were as follows: dress in the ballboy uniform, take care of all the balls, pass out balls before and after, make sure that all of the balls are put away, supply balls for the various drills, and if necessary participate in the drills.

After being a ballboy for a couple of years. I graduated to a player. As a player I was required to be on time, wear a jersey, wear shorts, participate in all drills, make sure my shorts were neatly stacked in the short pile, make sure that my jersey was hung up at the end of practice.

At the end of the year we would always have a big game. It was the only game of the year. We would play the blue vs the white. All three of the years that I played I was a white. After the game there was a big slide show and punch and cookies were served. While the slides of the ballboys and players were showed.

I now am a coach for the whites one of my brothers is playing on my team. My other brother is on the blues. The older one, the one on my team, shoots three pointers and makes them. The younger one is a good ball handler, and a great point gaurd.

I think that Juniors has really given me some good basketball skills, and I have really enjoyed all of my perspectives in this Program.
